- Molly Norris, the Seattle Weekly's popular cartoonist who started Facebook's "Everybody Draw Mohammed Day" page, did it as a joke. The Weekly explained after she disappeared "But on the insistence of top security specialists at the FBI, she is, as they put it, "going ghost" ... She will no longer be publishing cartoons in our paper or in City Arts magazine, where she has been a regular contributor. She is, in effect, being put into a witness-protection program—except, as she notes, without the government picking up the tab. It's all because of the appalling fatwa issued against her this summer, following her infamous "Everybody Draw Mohammed Day" cartoon..." This is an example of how Islamic blasphemy laws are already diminishing free speech in the U.S. with credible threats of violence. Is the FBI admitting there really are too many Lone Wolf™ assassins to be able to protect her until the threat is removed? Which is it, too many Muslims to control responding to a religious fatwa, or lone wolf Misunderstander™ of his religion?
